

Partner Program Guide

The portable-charging kiosk business — how it works and how partners earn

What Voltage Nexus Is

Voltage Nexus operates a network of portable phone-charging kiosks placed in high-traffic venues. Each kiosk rents charged power banks to the public and displays paid advertising on its screen — earning from two real revenue streams every time it's used. It's a straightforward product business: real machines, in real venues, serving real customers. No tokens and no digital currency — just equipment doing a job people genuinely need. The program launches with a 12-battery kiosk, with larger 24-, 48-, and 96-battery models to follow.

The Opportunity

People depend on their phones and mobile devices for payment, navigation, tickets, and work — so a dead battery is an immediate problem they'll pay to solve on the spot. Placed where phone dependence, foot traffic, and dwell time overlap — travel hubs, events, nightlife, retail, and hospitality — a charging kiosk becomes a small, repeat-use convenience that can also earn advertising revenue from its screen. Independent research points to steady growth in both venue-based charging and place-based digital advertising.

How the Partner Program Works

As a partner, you own kiosks and place them in venues. Those kiosks earn from public rental and advertising use, and you share in that revenue. You can also bring other partners into the program — and when you do, you earn on the real revenue produced by the kiosks they deploy. Every dollar in the program is tied to a machine that is actually placed and earning.

How You Earn

Earning source	What you receive	Paid on
Rental revenue share	40% of gross rental revenue	Kiosks you own and deploy
Advertising revenue share	40% of advertising revenue	Kiosks you own and deploy
Kiosk sale payment	One-time $150 per kiosk	Kiosks you personally sell to a partner you enroll (paid on your own sales)
Production override	12% of rental & advertising revenue	Deployed kiosks of the partners you enroll

The production override is paid only on real revenue from machines actually deployed and earning — never on a sale, a sign-up, or an enrollment.

The Production Principle

The program is built on one rule: you earn from production, not recruitment.

- No pay-to-play. You are never required to buy inventory or pay a fee to qualify for earnings.
- No recruiting income. Nothing is paid for enrolling a partner; enrollment on its own earns you nothing.
- No override without a deployed kiosk. If a machine isn't placed and earning, it produces no override.
- Non-return fees stay with the company. They are not part of partner earnings.

Back-Office Service

Each kiosk you own carries a $5 / month back-office service fee. This covers your live dashboard, kiosk telemetry, the SIM card that keeps each kiosk connected to the global network, and your partner back office for that machine. It is billed per owned kiosk, whether deployed or not — not as a membership or activation fee — and there are no other recurring charges. Billing begins 30 days after you purchase the kiosk, which gives you time to receive it into your possession before the monthly charge starts.

Your Equipment Is Protected

Every kiosk carries a 3-year hardware warranty. Any defect is met with a complete brand-new replacement unit — never a repair (you cover shipping). If a customer keeps a battery and is charged the non-return fee, that battery is replaced free and drop-shipped for the life of the kiosk. Batteries that simply wear out at the end of life are normal consumables and your responsibility to replace.

Getting Started

Getting started is simple: acquire a kiosk — or a multi-unit pack of 3, 4, or 5 — place it in a strong venue, and it begins earning from public use. Financing may be available on multi-unit packs. From there, you own a real, revenue-producing asset, and the rest of the program builds on the machines you actually put to work.

Earnings Disclosure

These figures are illustrative and hypothetical. They are not guarantees or projections of income. Actual results vary and depend on kiosks actually deployed and earning, individual effort, venue selection, foot traffic, and other factors. No income is earned for enrolling partners — earnings come only from the rental and advertising revenue of deployed kiosks. There is no guarantee you will earn any income.
